

Getting more out of Worldview

Learn more about the imagery

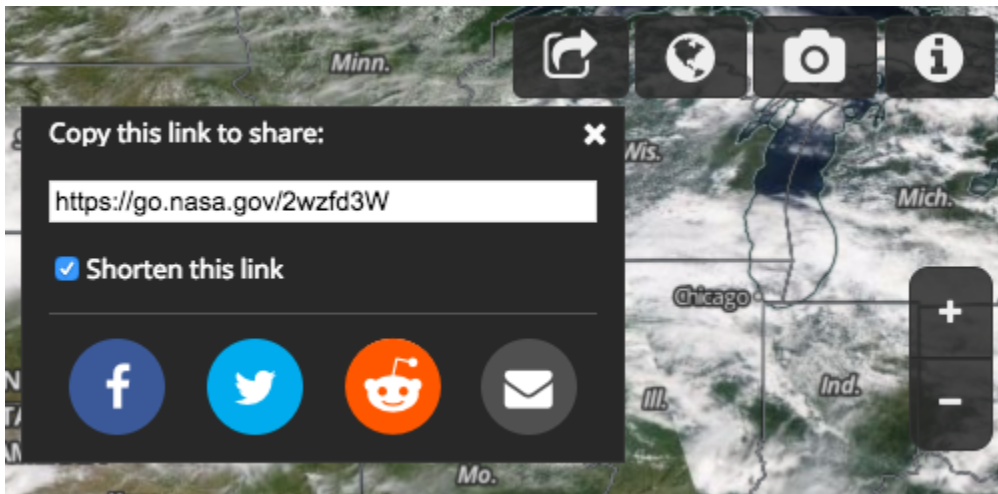

We've made some improvements and now you can find the layer descriptions anytime you bring up a layer. In the past, the descriptions were fairly difficult to find.

Whether you're scrolling through the categories, doing a search in the Layer Picker or even once you've loaded the layer into the Layer List, the descriptions are there!

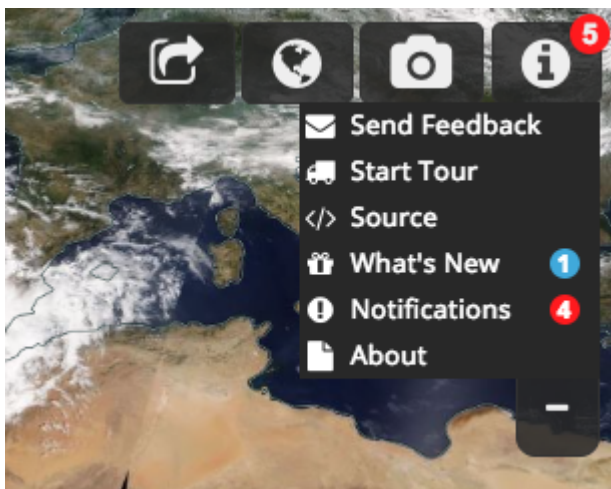

Share with your friends

When you've found an awesome image in Worldview, you can now share the URL with your friends in Facebook, Twitter (#NASAWorldview), Reddit and via email. Just click on the share icon in the top right corner of Worldview.

Find out when something's gone awry (or when something awesome has been added to Worldview!)

Worldview's incorporated a notification system so that you will be notified within Worldview if imagery delivery has been delayed or system maintenance is in progress. You might even find out if a new and exciting feature has been added to Worldview!

Coming soon...

We're always working on improving Worldview and cooking up the next new feature(s)! Currently, we're working on improving our search function and improving the browse and interaction with the Events feed. Check out our new Roadmap to see what our near-, mid- and long-term goals are and what we're prioritizing to work on next!
